

IN THE SPECIFICATION

Please amend the Specification as follows:

Page 5, second paragraph which starts on line 16 amend as follows:

A plurality of different Chinese herbs are added to the soup product. The herbs, while adding additional flavoring, help to increase the energy level and muscle strength of the consumer. The amount of Chinese herbs added is approximately 1% to about 7% by volume. Many different Chinese herbs may be added. However, the following Chinese herbs have been found to be extremely beneficial in increasing the energy level and muscle strength of the consumer, especially older individuals. The Chinese herbs include [(all are spelled phonetically)]: [yung folk yit, yuk thoungzone, onkcrue, fonong, puuckay, geedo, fudo, guan kang, langie, lucdo'nane, kao ly tim, and own chong] herbaepimedii, rhizoma cistanches, radix angelicae, radix codonopsis pilosulae, astrogalus, hoanglohy, fructus lycii, rhizoma aconiti, dry ginger, ganoderma lucidum, ziziphi spinosae, ginseng, and cordyceps. The amount of each of the above mentioned may very based on the taste and needs of the consumer. In accordance with one embodiment of the present invention, the Chinese herbs were added in the following amounts: [yung folk yit] herbaepimedii approximately .05% by volume, [yuk thoungzone] rhizoma cistanches approximately .05% by volume, [onkcrue] radix angelicae sinensis approximately .004% by volume, [fonong] radix codonopsis pilosulae approximately .05% by volume, [puuckay] astrogalus hoanglohy approximately .05% by volume, [geedo] fructus lycii approximately .04% by volume, [fudo] rhizoma aconiti approximately .04% by volume, [guan kang] dry ginger approximately .04% by volume, [langie] ganoderma lucidum approximately .05% by volume, [lucdo'nane] ziziphi spinosae approximately .05% by volume, [kao ly tim] ginseng approximately .005% by volume, and [own chong] cordyceps approximately .005% by volume.